WINTHROP: I with you'd never come to River Thity!

MARIAN: No you don't, Winthrop.

Slowly

WINTHROP:
Thithter! You believe him?

MARIAN:
I believe everything he ever said.

WINTHROP:
But he promised uth –

MARIAN: I know what he promised us and it all happened just like he said.
The lights. And the flags and the colors. And the cymbals.

WINTHROP:
Where wath all that?

MARIAN: In the way every kid in this town walked around here all summer, and looked and acted. Especially you! And the parents, too.
Does Mama wish he'd never come to River City?

WINTHROP:
Well you do, don't you?

MARIAN: No, Winthrop.
Now go, Harold - please.

WINTHROP:
Go on, Profethor, hurry up.

HAROLD: I can't go, Winthrop.
WINTHROP: Why not?
